Dear Partners and New York State Retailers of LG Electronics,

As you are aware, the State of New York has enacted legislation establishing a system for the collection and recycling of certain electronic waste. This law – the New York State Electronic Equipment Recycling and Reuse Act (“Act”) – requires manufacturers of certain consumer products sold to New York end user purchasers to provide certain information to retailers. In accordance with the Act, LG Electronics hereby informs you that we are registered with the New York State Department of Environmental Conservation (“NYSDEC”).

This Act also requires manufacturers to provide information about their electronic waste acceptance programs to retailers for distribution to purchasers of the covered electronic equipment. According to the NYSDEC:

“The public education program must inform consumers about the manufacturer's electronic waste acceptance program, encourage the acceptance programs' use, and must provide sufficient information to allow a consumer of CEE to return CEE for recycling or reuse, and must include:

- Written information either included in the product manual for, or at the time of sale of CEE, that provides a consumer of CEE to information on how to return CEE for recycling or reuse.”

“If written information regarding the manufacturer's electronic waste acceptance program is not included in the manufacturer's CEE product manual, then the manufacturer or its representing collective must provide information on the manufacturer's electronic waste acceptance programs to retailers for distribution to consumers purchasing CEE.”

This letter serves as a notification to retailers that LG Electronics and the LG brand is registered with the NYSDEC, and provides the website address and toll free telephone number below for consumers to find out how to recycle their unwanted and end-of-life electronics.
